GOVERNMENT’S RESPONSE TO REP. CUELLAR’S MOTION TO SUPPLEMENT THE RECORD AND FOR STAY PENDING APPEAL

Rep. Cuellar has moved to supplement the record for his interlocutory appeal of the denial of his motion to dismiss under the Speech or Debate Clause. ECF No. 148. The government does not oppose this relief, provided that the grand jury materials under seal in this Court are designated to remain under seal on appeal and that the grand jury materials reviewed ex parte by this Court are provided ex parte to the Fifth Circuit. The government does, however, oppose reconsideration of the denial of the motion to dismiss, the standard for which Rep. Cuellar does not even attempt to satisfy. See United States v. Fisch, No. 11-cr-722, 2016 WL 5914953, at *1 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 11, 2016) (Rosenthal, J.).

Rep. Cuellar has also moved to stay all proceedings in this Court pending his interlocutory appeal. ECF No. 148. During the meet and confer, the government’s position was that this case should not proceed to trial before the appeal is resolved, but that other matters not involved in the appeal could proceed in this Court. The government’s position was based on the normal rule that although “an interlocutory appeal[] ‘divests the district court of its control over those aspects of the case involved in the appeal,’” “the district court may still proceed with matters that are not involved in the appeal.” Coinbase, Inc. v. Bielski, 599 U.S. 736, 740–41 & n.2 (2023) (citation omitted); accord Charles Alan Wright & Arthur R. Miller, 16A Federal Practice & Procedure § 3949.1 (5th ed., May 2025 update).

In subsequent legal research, however, the government discovered Fifth Circuit case law indicating that this Court likely lacks jurisdiction over the entire case against Rep. Cuellar, including matters not involved in the appeal:

[T]he filing of a non-frivolous notice of interlocutory appeal following a district court’s denial of a defendant’s immunity defense divests the district court of jurisdiction to proceed against that defendant. ... “[T]he divestiture of jurisdiction occasioned by the filing of a timely notice of appeal is especially significant when the appeal is an interlocutory one” on an immunity issue.

Williams v. Brooks, 996 F.2d 728, 729–30 & n.2 (5th Cir. 1993) (citations omitted).¹ Rep. Cuellar’s interlocutory appeal on Speech or Debate Clause grounds thus likely divests this Court of jurisdiction over the case against him until the appeal is resolved.

Nevertheless, the Court retains discretion to issue an “indicative” ruling on motions while the appeal is pending under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 37. Rule 37(a) says: “If a timely motion is made for relief that the court lacks authority to grant because of an appeal that has been docketed and is pending, the court may: (1) defer considering the motion; (2) deny the motion; or (3) state either that it would grant the motion if the court of appeals remands for that purpose or that the motion raises a substantial issue.” If the district court indicates that it “would grant the motion,” the movant must notify the court of appeals, Fed. R. Crim. P. 37(b), which may, in its discretion, issue a limited remand while retaining jurisdiction over the appeal, Fed. R. App. P. 12.1(b). Once the case is remanded and the district court regains jurisdiction, either on the limited basis contemplated by Rule 12.1(b) or after the disposition of the appeal, it can issue the relief in the indicative ruling.

Here, the Court should exercise its discretion under Rule 37 to issue indicative rulings on two matters. First, the Court should issue indicative rulings on the pending motions under the Classified Information Procedures Act (CIPA): Rep. Cuellar's CIPA § 5 notice and classified discovery requests (see ECF No. 143) and the government's motion to strike the CIPA § 5 notice and for a protective order denying the classified discovery requests (see ECF No. 147). These motions are fully briefed, and the ex parte hearings on the motions — which require additional planning and coordination with the Classified Information Security Officer — are scheduled for October 10. ECF No. 134. The burden of continuing to litigate these CIPA issues is thus minimal. Also, these CIPA issues are not involved in the interlocutory appeal, so an indicative ruling would not “interfere with” the appeal. See Marrese v. Am. Acad. of Orthopaedic Surgeons, 470 U.S. 373, 379 (1985). Issuing an indicative ruling would, however, prevent unnecessary delay after the appeal is resolved.

Second, the government intends to move pursuant to Rule 15 to depose two foreign witnesses who cannot be compelled to travel to Houston to testify at trial. The Court should issue an indicative ruling on that forthcoming motion. The Rule 15 issue is not involved in the interlocutory appeal, and litigating this discrete issue would not be burdensome. If the Court's indicative ruling were to grant the Rule 15 motion, the government would intend to wait until the appeal is resolved to conduct the depositions. Nevertheless, an indicative ruling would allow the government to begin working with foreign authorities to arrange the logistics for depositions in a foreign country and a foreign language. An indicative ruling would thus expedite proceedings in this Court after the appeal is resolved.

The Court should deny Rep. Cuellar's stay motion as moot and exercise its discretion to issue indicative rulings on the CIPA and Rule 15 motions.
